Aligned to Alaska Cultural Standards & Grade Level Expectations for Social Studies

Emphasizing historical inquiry, cultural literacy, and understanding of diverse peoples and traditions — including Alaska's own rich Indigenous heritage:

Standard	Grade	How History Unboxed Addresses It
AK GLE SS K–2 — Students develop an awareness of time and change by exploring the past through stories, artifacts, and community connections.	K-2	Modules connect young learners to the past through narrative and a hands-on craft — mirroring the artifact-based and story-based learning of Alaska's educational philosophy.
AK GLE SS 3–5 — Students identify and describe the cultural contributions of diverse peoples and civilizations across the world and through time.	3-5	Culture-specific modules on Indigenous Americas, world civilizations, and historical cultures align with Alaska's emphasis on respecting diverse cultural traditions.
AK Cultural Standard A — Culturally-knowledgeable students are well-grounded in the cultural traditions and practices of their communities and have a broad understanding of the cultures of the world.	6-8	Modules on non-Western and Indigenous cultures — peoples of the Americas, Asia, Africa, and Pacific — support Cultural Standard A's emphasis on global cultural literacy.
AK Cultural Standard E — Students demonstrate an understanding of the relationship between cultural identity and history by making connections between past and present ways of life.	9-12	Craft components are a direct expression of Cultural Standard E: students create a period-authentic object to understand how past peoples lived and what they valued.
AK GLE SS (Inquiry strand) — Students gather, interpret, and communicate information from primary and secondary sources to understand history.	K-12	Activities build primary source interpretation skills; booklets provide historical context and evidence. Hands-on crafts transform historical inquiry into a tangible artifact.
